Deliberation in committees, boards and groups as well as consultation is ubiquitous in business, politics and private life. A large and growing literature on team decision making in psychology, management and behavioral economics suggests that communication with others leads to, by some measures, better decisions.

Decision-making. One experiment measured complexity in a room by the number of small objects and appliances present; a simple room had less of those things. Cognitive function was greatly affected by the higher measure of environmental complexity making it easier to think about the situation and make a better decision.
